Men Born From 1902 to 1924 Must Prove Compliance With Mobilization Regulations When Asking Permits to Seek Employment

By Order pursuant to National Selective Service Civilian Regulations, a change is now made in the issue of permits to seek employment.

After April 30, 1943, permits may be refused to any man born from 1902 to 1924, inclusive, who has reached 19, unless he presents satisfactory evidence of compliance with Mobilization Regulations, in one of the following forms:

(a) A certificate of discharge from His Majesty's Forces during this war; or (b) a rejection slip issued by the Army on application for enlistment; or (c) a certificate of medical examination from the Registrar of a Mobilization Board; or (d) a postponement order certificate from the Registrar of a Mobilization Board; or (e) if born from 1902 to 1916 inclusive, a statutory declaration on form available in employment office, that he is not a "single person" under Mobilization Regulations.

Documents in (a), (b) and (c) above need not be presented only the first time a permit is sought after April 30, 1943, unless asked for by a Selective Service Officer. Documents in (c) and (d) above must be presented each time a permit is applied for.

(1) Male persons applying for permits by mail should forward with their applications the evidence required, except (c) above.

(2) A Selective Service Officer MAY furnish a permit without first being handed evidence, where the applicant's service are required for immediate employment, or where a permit is asked for by mail, but in these cases the evidence must be presented to the Selective Service Officer later, usually WITHIN THREE DAYS of the issue of the permit.

All men born from 1902 to 1924, who have reached age 19, are urged to co-operate with your Employment and Selective Service Office. Bring your documents with you.

Permits Available

Giving Extra Sugar Tea And Coffee

For Prisoners Of War Parcels
For some time now special permits have been available for Canadians sending sugar, tea and coffee, in personal parcels to next-of-kin who are prisoners of war. This is good news because it means that purchases of these goods do not cut into their own rationing.

A form known as "Prisoners of War Purchase Permit" is being sent to all next-of-kin by the Department of National War Services. This form is made out in duplicate, one copy to be sent to the Ration Administrator of the War Service and Trade Board in Montreal, the other to be left with the merchant from whom the rationed commodity is purchased.

Postal Censors check each parcel to prisoners to make certain that articles purchased are sent along to the boys in the prison camps. Quantities which may be sent in any personal parcel to a prisoner of war includes up to one pound of coffee, and a quarter of a pound of tea, and two pounds of sugar which may be made into hard candy.

"Charles!" She was breathless. "It's too beautiful. No, really you spell me." She fingered the great gem stone. "Will you put it on for me?"

He hesitated. Then his fingers just lightly trailed her skin as he clasped it together. She was trembling. Maybe now in this moment he would take her in his arms, unloose the floodgates of his heart.

Finally he stood away and looked at her. "Do you know, you're a very beautiful woman. She didn't reply. "Margaret," he asked, "are you happy?"

"Why do you ask?" The moment was gone.

"I don't know. I wondered. Often, I've seen a look in your eyes as if you were thinking of something added gently. Isn't there something morbid in burying one's heart with the dead?"

There was a tinge of bitterness in her reply. "That's a strange thing for you to say." She went on with suppressed emotion. "Charles, I know you feel there really is someone and that some day you may find her. But doesn't it frighten you sometimes to know that the years are passing and that you may lose the capacity for happiness? You may have come so near her—perhaps on the street. You may even have met her, Charles, and not known her. It might even be someone you've never touched in his arm. "Charles, it might even be me."

He drew back. It was as if she had desecrated something dear and beloved. "Margaret," he said in kindly protest.

Her mouth twisted. She began talking wildly. "Charles, I'd like a change, a rest. I'd like to travel—I'm tired. It's been so strainful. I suppose I'm just a little nobody you know. It's harder than I thought being the wife of Charles Rainier." He was gazing at her in vague uneasiness. "You are over tired I think. Shall we talk about it in the morning?"

"In the morning," she said tonelessly. "Yes, Charles. Goodnight." The door closed behind him. Her voice rose in a despairing whisper. "Smithy. Oh Smithy . . ."

Paula's trip to South America was planned and set for the next afternoon. Several days later she was ready to leave. Smithy, along with his assistant Harrison, took her to the train.

She stood at the door of her railway carriage and he said stiffly, "Is there place where you're going to the country—on your way?"

"Not quite." The little vine covered cottage where she and Smithy had lived would house her once more and she would bid it a final adieu. "No, it's in Wickham, a quiet little village with a delightful old inn. I want to go there again. I was happy there once."

The train was ready to start. Harrison put the last piece of luggage in the vestibule. Now the train was moving slowly. Smithy walked alongside. "I wish you weren't leaving. It—it will seem strange not to talk things over with you—" He kissed her cheek. "You'll let me hear from you?"

"Of course. Goodbye Charles. Goodbye . . ."

Her voice came back faintly once more. Then she was gone. He stood there troubled and a bit frightened. He heard Harrison speaking to him. "We'd better start for the Melbridge Cable Works, sir. The telegram was urgent."

They picked up some papers at the office and immediately boarded the train. Once in Melbridge, the business at the Cable Works was straightened out. The men had been planning to strike unless their demands were met. However, Sir Charles Rainier settled the matter within minutes, not only by raising wages but shortening hours and bettering working conditions in general.

He was smiling vaguely as he left the place with Harrison. In the back of his mind, the little tobaccoist still resounded. By the time they reached the village it was evening. There was still an air of train departure. They would see a bit of Melbridge. He and Harrison made for a small bar. Emerging into the fog a bit later Harrison discovered that they were out of cigarettes.

Smithy nodded briefly. "Well never mind there's a little tobaccoist shop just around the corner." Harrison glanced at him in surprise.

They bought their cigarettes but as they came outside Harrison said, "I thought you told me you'd never been in Melbridge."

"I haven't." Smithy returned indifferently. Then, all at once, he paled. Strange. He had said, "There's a little tobaccoist shop just around the corner." The shop was off the main street. He couldn't have seen it on his way from the station. Harrison I don't understand it. . . .

Mists were swirling in his head . . . he could hear bells and whistles too. A sweet broke out on his forehead. He put a shaking hand to a railing.

"Harrison, let me think. That little shop—and there's a big place here on a hill . . . it has wide gates and a high wall all around it . . ."

Harrison was alarmed. "Sir, if you're ill . . ."

"No, no, Harrison. I've got to trace it." He put his hands over his eyes. There were things, shapes at the back of his mind. "I was trying to get away from something . . . trying to escape. And there was a girl . . . He started forward in excitement. "I loved her. We were married . . ."

He seemed dazed. "Harrison, leave me now. I'm going up there on the hill to that building. There's something I want to know . . . must know . . ."

Harrison stood there and watched him hurry off. Harrison was a good fellow and now he was terribly troubled. Poor Lady Rainier. What a blow this would be to her. She had said she would be at Wickham. He must seek her out . . . warn her.

It was early the next morning that he found her in the little vine covered cottage. She had been sitting at the piano softly fingering a melody, her eyes on the white mists of the hills. "Lady Rainier!" He rushed to her and warmly took her hands. "Oh I'm so glad I've found you!"

Paula said softly. "Then he is here. What has happened?"

Harrison spoke almost wildly. "I think the world of him Lady Rainier, you know that he doesn't realize what he's doing." Brieley exclaimed, "The happenings after their visit to the tobaccoist's. "And—it—it seems there was a woman and he married her. He says he must find her. It's all he seems to care about. It's got to be stopped. It could ruin him and it would be dreadful for you." He looked at her and burst out. "It's got to be stopped. I've been very calm. When I try to imagine how you must feel . . ."

Her voice was tender. "I don't feel anything yet—at least not much. But I keep on thinking of what you said, that he doesn't care."

Harrison was miserable. "I know. It's awful. I'm dreadfully sorry. At all once, she flung out her arms. "Oh no Harrison, it's wonderful. He'd throw over everything his future, his ambitions, everything if he could find her." She turned and looked out of the window. "And Harrison, there he is. You see. The big willow tree on the corner? He's coming past the church, walking through that little rambling garden."

Yes, it was Smithy, moving very slowly along the road. Paula could almost feel his heart beating. Now he had opened the gate. It creaked a little. He was coming up the path. With shaking hand he touched the knob of the door.

It opened and she stood there. "Smithy," she said, ever so softly. He faced her. "Paula . . ." He

Reason There Are Fewer Women

Now In Russian Army

Although recent communiques have singled out women snipers and women combat pilots in the Red Army, mentioning their fighting feats, it is difficult now for women to get combat duty in the Soviet forces.

During the first year of the war there were more women in the ranks than now. At that time, only physical fitness and a statement of voluntary service were sufficient to let them fight.

Now Red Army commanders are reluctant to accept them—although individuals manage to make their way to the front ranks.

Russia has no special branches for women, similar to the Auxiliaries in other countries.

Most women serving with the army are in the medical corps, not only in base hospitals but at front line evacuation points and even accompanying fighting squads on the battle front.

DOING NIGHT WORK

Civilian prisoners in jails in England and Wales are going over to the night shift to make goods for the army. First prisoners to adopt this scheme are at Manchester and Wakefield where weaving machinery has been installed in jails and cloth is being woven.

Wedding Bells

A quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wright Lawrence of Calgary, on Thursday, April 22nd, of Mrs. V. V. Lee and Mr. R. V. Lawrence, both of Chinook, Alberta. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Hollingsworth of Hillhurst United Church.

The bride wore a Robins Egg blue dress with hat and accessories of Navy.

About fifteen guests were present and a dainty wedding supper was served.

The bride and groom will reside on the latter's farm north of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence have the best wishes of all for a happy married life.

PRAIRIE FIRE SWEEPS SOUTH DISTRICT

A Prairie Fire, which burst over several sections, occurred south of town during the severe dust and wind storm of Friday, starting in the Heathdale district, it travelled east, to the Clemens district where it was stopped, by the efforts of the farmers who were exhausted having to fight it until after midnight.

Several buildings were burned, including the barn and other out buildings of the Myrtle Schol District. The house was undamaged. The Maywhare buildings on the Rearville road, were also consumed but part of the barn was saved.

The greatest loss was sustained by Keith Maurer who lost a considerable number of barge stacks of wheat. Fortunately the fire stopped a few yards from another row of stacks the wind having suddenly ceased, or the whole of last year's crop on 200 acres would have been destroyed.

YOUR SON (or your neighbor's son) is in battle dress perhaps ... on a ship at sea, or flying a bomber. You are proud of him, but you pray for the time when he will be back home. You will do anything you can, you say, ... everything you can ... to bring him home safe, and bring him home soon.

Well, here is one thing you can do. You can buy Victory Bonds.

When you buy Victory Bonds you help your boy to do the big job he is doing now. You help to make sure that he has everything he needs; better equipment than the enemy has. And you are saving money to have a better home for your boy to return to.

HAVE MONEY FOR HIM WHEN HE COMES HOME

He will want to work with new farm implements ... new equipment ... to replace things that may be worn out. He will have new ideas to improve the farm. He may want to experiment with new crops, new stock, new farming methods. He's young and ambitious as you want him to be.

He will need money to do things he plans to do. Victory Bonds ... money saved now and loaned to Canada to help win the war ... will be yours and his to use when the war is over.

WHAT IS A VICTORY BOND?

A VICTORY BOND is the promise of the Dominion of Canada to repay in cash the full face value of the Bond at the time stipulated, with half-yearly interest at the rate of 3% per annum until maturity. A Victory Bond is the safest investment in Canada. The entire resources of the Dominion stand behind it. Canada has been issuing bonds for 75 years, and has never failed to pay every dollar of principal and interest. A Victory Bond is an asset more readily converted into cash than any other security.
